Ireland - Political

Politically, Ireland is divided between the Republic of Ireland, which covers five-sixths of the island, and Northern Ireland (also called Ulster), a part of the United Kingdom, which covers the remaining area and is located in the north-east of the island. The population of Ireland is about 6.9 million. About 5 million live in the Republic of Ireland and just over 1.9 million live in Northern Ireland.

The United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland - Heads of State -

as the successor to Queen Elizabeth II Charles is the Head of State of the United Kingdom and as such the Head of State of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland (Ulster) as well as 14 further sovereign states designated Commonwealth Realms and including Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

In addition, he is the Head of the Commonwealth of Nations comprising 56 states.

King Charles' family name is Mountbatten-Windsor. Mountbatten is the anglicised variant of his fathers family name Battenberg. The family name of Queen Elizabeth II was Windsor.

Michael D. Higgins

is a member of the Irish Labour Party and has been the 9th President of the Republic of Ireland since 11 November 2011. In the Republic of Ireland the President is elected by the people, which is different from Germany where the President is elected by the Federal Assembly (Bundesversammlung) comprising all MPs and elected delegates from the German Länder.

The Commonwealth dates back to the mid 20th century with the decolonisation of the British Empire through increased self-governance of its territories. It was formally constituted by the London Declaration in 1949, which established the member states as "free and equal". The symbol of this free association is King Charles III who is the Head of the Commonwealth.

Member states have no legal obligation to one another. Instead, they are united by language, history, culture, and their shared values of democracy, human rights, and the rule of law.
